

Workshop for PhD-Students at the Institute of Social and Cultural Anthropology, Vienna 28.-30.06.2017

This workshop is open for Social and Cultural Anthropology students only. The extended application deadline is 18th May 2017.

Selected participants will be committed to submit a short paper from their PhD work (max. 5000 words) by 13.06.2017 to be commented by one of the international scholars (see below), prepare a 20 minutes presentation at the workshop and cover the provided reading list. Their paper and presentation have to fit within the work of one of the following international guest lecturers:

Dr. Stand Frankland, University of St Andrews

Dr Frankland does research in visual anthropology (overlapping with art practices). His research interests further lie with African 'hunter-gatherers'-communities and hyper-marginalities, colonial and postcolonial representations of Africa, as well as concerns with development, conservation and tourism.

Dr Anna Mann, University of Copenhagen

Dr Mann's research lies at the intersection of science and technology studies (STS) and social and cultural anthropology. In her current project she investigates life with a disease, illuminating "the everyday life" and "the mundane" in her work. In the past she did a project on "Tasting in mundane practices" looking at how tasting is done in various practices in different situations and sites in Western Europe.

Interested students should apply for the workshop via email by 10.05.2016.

Please send a short CV and a brief 1 page description of your PhD thesis to Prof. Ayse Caglar ayse.caglar@univie.ac.at and Lotte Liegmann Liselotte.liegmann@univie.ac.at . Please mention a preference for one of the international guest lecturers.
